Some background information:

My academic career is a second career and has therefore a somewhat uncommon trajectory. I started my MA social psychology at the age of 27. I combined my fulltime study with a fulltime job and gave birth to my first child during my MA. After 6 years I graduated. At the age of 34, I started my PhD project. During this PhD project, I gave birth to two more children. Unfortunately, one of them was diagnosed with Edwards disease (Trisomi 18) and died after 19 days. After her death, it took me 6 month to resume my PhD project. This, combined with the regular pregnancy leaves, all in all took 14 months. Despite these delays, completion of my PhD project have only taken 5 years. At the age of 39, I started as postdoctoral researcher for 5 years. Again, an uncommon construal of this position, because I held several professional positions next to several responsibilities uncommon for Postdocs. Rather than devoting 80% of my PostDoc time to research I acquired experience in teaching, management, acquisition, PhD supervision and valorization. For more details I kindly refer to the pages to come.

RESEARCH

My research interests focus on protest participation. All my research projects converge on the linkage between socio-political structures and how peoples' perceptions and interpretations thereof affect their political behavior. Be it the large comparative study on participation in demonstrations granted by the ESF/NWO, mobilization via social media, more radical forms of protest envisioned by young Dutch Moroccans or Dutch youngsters or the evolution of protest in evolving neighborhoods granted by the KNAW, the individual and its political behavior always figure centre stage. I designed and coordinated those studies and I am coordinator of the large comparative study of street demonstrations (together with Stefaan Walgrave & Bert Klandermans) and Project leader of the VINEX/KNAW project. This coordination evolves fruitful, both projects are well-versed and very interesting data are collected.

TEACHING

Over the years I have designed, developed and taught several courses, trajectories and projects. Student evaluation scores for teacher qualities (on a scale 1-5): Lowest: 4,42, highest 4.80. Students particularly praise my passion, commitment and enthusiasm.

In 2011 I finished the University Teaching course BKO with the following evaluation: 66% of the criteria were assessed as 'Outstanding (++)' and 34% as 'Good' (+): Illustrated as follows:

"Op 11 december 2011 voerden Geert de Vries en Sjoerd Sinke een beoordelingsgesprek met Jacquelen van Stekelenburg voor haar basiskwalificatie onderwijs. Jacquelen heeft zich ontwikkeld tot een zeer ervaren docent die met haar enthousiasme studenten goed aan het werk krijgt. Ze is in staat om steeds op creatieve wijze met studenten academisch onderwijs vorm te geven. Ze heeft geoefend in haar interactieve manier van lesgeven. Uit haar verantwoording blijkt dat ze goed in staat is om te reflecteren op haar onderwijs om zo ook zichzelf continu te verbeteren."
